Camilla Bjørslev Paulsen specialises in procurement law and advises in the interfaces between public and private parties.

Camilla advises especially utility companies and public authorities in matters concerning energy and utilities law. She provides assistance in connection with tender proceedings as well as the negotiation, conclusion and use of different types of contracts.

She is particularly experienced in contracts concerning partnerships between public and private parties, including PPP projects (Public Private Partnership), and has acted for clients such as the City of Copenhagen and Danish utility company Skanderborg Forsyning A/S.

In addition, Camilla has built up particular experience within the field of electricity supply, where she provides advice on calls for tenders for the construction, sale and purchase of turnkey projects, including energy production facilities and wind farms.

She also provides assistance on all legal aspects relating to the subsequent operation, for example on the conclusion and application of complex PPA contracts.

Furthermore, Camilla is involved in international commercial agreements as well as in project structuring and project completion.
