Anne Louise Haack Andersen specialises in social housing/subsidised housing and project development and has, for many years, assisted social housing organisations, pension companies, property developers and investors in matters concerning the realisation of social or private residential housing projects and major real-estate transactions.

Anne Louise is head of DLA Piper Denmark's social housing team and highly specialised in the legal affairs of social housing organisations; she is widely experienced in the development of social housing areas as well as in completing property-development projects for social and private housing units.

Anne Louise advises on all aspects of project development, matters concerning renovation and new construction, including local-plan processes, tender proceedings, creating new properties, organising ownership structures, financing, due diligence, negotiating and concluding contracts as well as completing real-estate transactions.

In her advisory services, Anne Louise combines her commercial understanding of property development and talent in managing and driving comprehensive processes with a solution-oriented approach to ensure progress and increased value with a focus on the project's success criteria.

Anne Louise is often involved in pre-legislative work within her field and has, over the years, assisted social housing organisations and public authorities in preparing a number of important models for the purpose of realising mixed private-social housing construction and developing housing areas, including the delegated employer model. She has also advised on the regulation of private land development companies.

Finally, Anne Louise provides advice in complex regulatory matters within her field, including on implementing master plans and conversion plans, financing, handling major related legal cases in the event of rehousing of tenants, organising secondary activities and, finally, solving supervisory issues.
