The conflict in Ukraine and the imposed sanctions against Russia and Belarus have placed companies worldwide in a new and challenging reality.

The same applies to sanctions and export control rules in relation to other countries.

Sanctions and export control rules have extensive effects and implications for many companies. Companies must comply with these rules and may inadvertently risk violating them.

We provide advice and assistance to companies on all matters related to sanctions and export control, including those concerning dual-use products and technologies.

In DLA Piper, we use our network of lawyers in more than 90 offices in more than 40 countries, including in the United Kingdom and USA, when this is relevant.

You and your company are welcome to contact us if you would like to receive advice or assistance in relation to sanctions or export control.
